

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to an interworking method and apparatus for a data connection between a first terminal supporting a first processing scheme and a second terminal supporting a second processing scheme, wherein the first and second processing schemes are checked, and the first processing scheme is adapted to the second processing scheme, when the checking indicates that the first processing scheme is not supported by the second terminal. Thus, a mapping is performed and different processing capabilities are used on different portions of the data connection.

10008783.111301